About Ventures

We're working to create the world we want in partnership with rural Latino working-class families in California's Central Coast to ensure a shared and equitable economic future for all.

Our transformational programs make certain that individuals understand and use their economic and political power. From building their savings to advocating for a living wage, our approach builds community and connects financial stability, wealth building, and self-determination.

Our work creates dignity by recognizing, acknowledging, and valuing our community members' leadership in making change happen. Together, we are working towards a shared and prosperous economic future where zip code, race, gender, or immigration status do not dictate income or wealth.

We believe that:

- Money, and how it is earned, used, and implemented to build wealth and financial systems, is a key component to building wellbeing and a vibrant society.
- We must be intentional and explicit in our work towards racial and gender equity, as social systemic oppressions, including those based on race and gender, are replicated and augmented through the current economic system and related policies.
- Local economies and equitable distribution of income and wealth provide the greatest return and align best in creating wellbeing.
- Money and financing are not well understood and there is a level of mystification around the topic that prevents engagement.

We work in ways that:

- are family centered and culturally appropriate;
- remove system level barriers to economic equity;
- provide leadership development and financial education for children and youth;
- develop new financial and asset building vehicles; and
- lift and leverage the great work already being done.

Our geographic reach encompasses Monterey, San Benito, and Santa Cruz Counties. Ventures is Latina, immigrant-led organization.

About Futuro

A 2017 Worker-Owned Cooperative Market Opportunity for the Central Coast report was developed at Ventures' request by Project Equity and Democracy at Work Institute (DAWI). This report identified key steps to support cooperative business structures as a key component to local equitable economic development. From 2018-2019, Ventures focused on supporting local policy and workforce development engagement around business succession opportunities to employee-owned structures in the region. Including conversations of local capital engagement.

The COVID-19 pandemic, and its disproportionate negative impact on working class immigrant households, raised cooperative development as an available and valuable opportunity, primarily in rural workforces in need of alternative wealth building vehicles. Starting in 2021, Ventures worked closely with community members, including launching a rapid response worker owned cooperative with the support of DAWI and Sustainable Economies Law Center (SELC), to explore the development of Futuro - a model of immigrant focused worker-owned cooperative incubator and accelerator.

Working with its national, regional, and local partners, Ventures is finalizing the development of Futuro and starting to target the identification of its first member cooperative to provide income security and economic mobility for rural working-class Central Coast residents, with a focus on immigrant entrepreneurs, through worker-cooperative development. This includes business technical assistance, market research, and business feasibility support.

Futuro aims to be self-sustaining within a 5-year period and to be owned and managed by representatives of member worker-owned co-ops who provide oversight for its management. Focused on service-based business, the effort includes buildout of the local ecosystem, including local economic development, integration of cooperatives, community education, and business provider engagement in cooperative clients.
